The Cape Cod Hydrangea Society's Display Garden
• The Display Garden is a joint effort between the Cape Cod Hydrangea Society and Heritage Museums and Gardens.
• Initial planting began in 2008 and continued through 2010.
• Relocations and expansions followed in 2012 and 2013
• Further, but more modest 'improvements', have continued annually.
• This garden is maintained almost exclusively by the Society
• Eight hydrangea species reside in the garden; the number of distinct cultivars now exceeds 160.
• Many of the hydrangea macrophylla cultivars are 'rare' and no longer produced commercially. Nevertheless, these are treasured plants representing the wonderful diversity and splendor of the genus Hydrangea.

The North American Hydrangea Test Garden
Hydrangeas 2015 Conference at Heritage on Cape Cod
First major all hydrangea event in the US since 2005
Strong program, supportive participants, and strong hydrangea cultural location = all positives!
Test Garden conceived and initiated by Dr. Mike Dirr.
Heritage already committed to expanding hydrangea presence.
Test Garden 'opened' July 2016 – committed to evaluating & documenting 'reblooming' characteristics of Hydrangea macrophylla introductions
